THURSDAY MORNING, SEPT. 5, 1550

or The celebration before the United Brothers and Philermenian Societies took place in Providence, on Tuesday last. The Oration was by Henry J. Raymond, Esq., of New York. His subject was " The duty of the American Scholar," Mr. Raymond spoke an hour and forty minutes, and fairly hored his audience out of all patience. Ho suggested a few good thoughts all of which might have been well express ed in thirty minutes; the rest was a cunstant repetition of previously advanced ideas, strong out, in miserably bad taste to the injury of what was really good in the Oration.

Park Benjamin, Esq., delivered the Poem. His subject, was " Fashion," and it was all that we said it would be, in Tues day's paper. He rebuked the leading and most ridiculous fashions of the day in a rigidly satirical manner, which kept the house in a roar of laughter from the com moncement to the close. At times, the applause was perfectly deafning, and must have been most gratifying to the Poet. It gave the highest satisfaction; the Poets was written for the occasion. Az, Benjamin will probably deliver the Poem in thi town some evening next week.

Ma. Epiron :

The doings of our worthy Tow Conneil don't seem to come quite up to their high sounding manifesto. After having published a score of windy ordi naneas, driven the poor organ-grinders ou of town, and committed divers other pitiful acts of petty tyranny, they are repealing on their shining laurels. Camblers are permitted to carry on their deeds of dark ness openly and boldly, (a crime which throws most other crimes into the shade,) and will continue to, I suppose, as long as they do it in such a genteel manner. There are more obstructions on our sidewalks than ever, and all kind of nulsances are permitted to corrupt the atmosphere, and no notice is taken of them unless formal complaint is made. This may be an improvement on the old system of visiting every one's premises, so that one neighbor would ant he compelled to complain of another. but we cannot see it so, -it is very much Ilko the reform in the Court of Probatoall the apokes but one taken out of an old wheel to strengthen it. There are other things "too numerous to mention," which we shall not name now; the public begin to think that they are paying a very high price for a very poor whistle.

" Ah, Coorge," the weeping angel said, and on my shoulder full her head-" For constancy, my tear's are hostage -- but when you write, please pay the postage."

THE THOY TRACEDY .-- It is now stated that William E. Caldwell and Louisa Knapp, the parties to the recent tragedy at Troy, were formerly engaged to be married, but that during his absence, on a voyage to China, she was importuned to marry Knapp, and she yielded, although she still loved Caldwell. Their meeting, after a long separation, resulted in her declaring her determination to desert her husband.— She did not wish to live without Caldwell, and told him that she could not, and that it was her determination to remain with him, notwithstanding she was the wife of another. Caldwell finally left her, on a visit to his friends in Albany, promising her to return to New York in a few days. A friend of Caldwell says:

"After the boat was under way, and while be was walking the deck, to his utter astonishment, she appeared before him. The thought at once pierced him that she had indeed abandoned her home, and resolved, regardless of all the tremendous consequences, to share his fate; and her words shortly corroborated what had passed, like lightning through his soul. They immediately proceeded to his state-room, and there they resolved, in the face of all the terrible circumstances around them, to never part again. They did not part; but arrived in Albany, and took lodgings at the Delevan House. He left her there, and made his contemplated visit to Whitehall, and returned in about ten days, she in the meantime receiving her meals in her room, according to his suggestion, in order to avoid observation. He returned and took rooms with her at the American Hotel, where he wrote the published letter to the editor of the Whitehall paper; he remained at the American a few days, but thought it was too publie a place, and engaged lodgings at a House,-Air. Strong, from the commit- private house in Jay street, where he remained about one week; then took the eastern cars and went to Williamstown, and was susprised and pursued by some one, as he remarked in Troy, that he had whipped two constables and escaped, the particulars of which will soon appear. He escaped in a one horse carriage, and arrived at St. Charles Hotel on Tuesday morning, about four o'clock. They were resolved to die- with his own hand he opened the portals of eternity."
